Information regarding public transport

Munich Public Transport's Association's Website: <http://www.mvv-muenchen.de>

A few notes on ticketing

If you stay in Munich, you have basically three options to buy tickets to get to the university. The tickets mentioned below include the following means of transportation: Railway, subway, bus and tram.

1. A one-day-ticket for "München Innenraum", which is valid for all over Munich (white zone) (but not all suburbs) and valid to get to the university. The ticket needs to be validated after buying it and is valid until the next day 4 am.
2. A one-trip-ticket, valid for one way to Neubiberg. It needs say "1 Zone".
3. A multi-ticket, so called "Streifenkarte". It has ten "stripes". For a one-way trip from / to Munich to / from Neubiberg, you need to validate 2 stripes.

Note: All full registrations include a seven-day ticket for the Munich public transport system!

The probably most flexible, hassle free ticket is the "one-day-ticket". It's currently only 10% more expensive than two one-ways, so it's probably worth getting it. Getting from the airport to the city is more expensive. We strongly recommend using public transport and buying a day ticket "Tageskarte Gesamtnetz" for 10 Euro. A taxi ride is ~ 60 Euro and depending of the time of arrival not faster. To all hotels, you'll prefer the S8 over the S1, because it is quicker. You'll need to change trains at Munich East (Ostbahnhof).

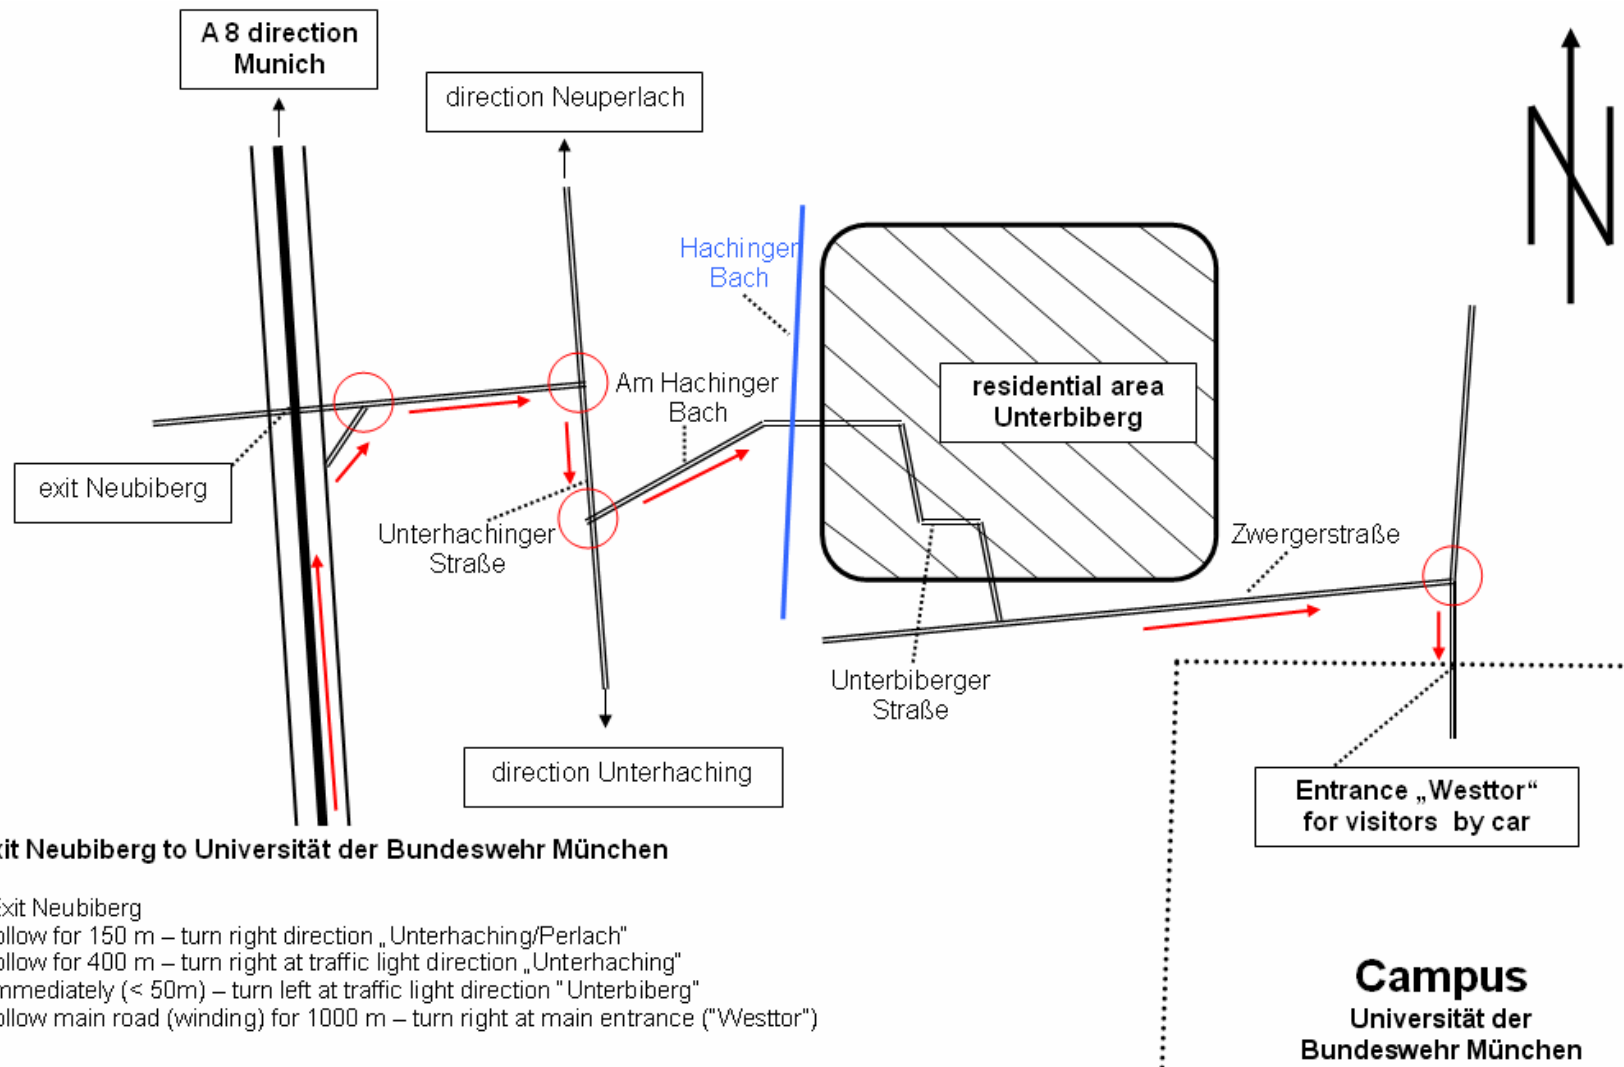

Train station Neuperlach Süd

The university is easily accessible from the suburban and underground train station at "Neuperlach Süd" (subway: U5 to Neuperlach Süd, railway S6 to Aying or Höhenkirchen-Siegertsbrunn). From there it is a 5 minute bus ride (busses 217 to Campeon or 218 to Unterhaching) to the main gate. The stop's name is "Lilienthalstraße" (Lilienthal street). It is the second stop. You might ask the driver to assist you, some of them actually speak German, a few English - and again some of them are really helpful. There is a bus every 10 minutes and no need to hurry, if you arrive by train, because the bus will leave just before the train arrives. Although, on your way back to the city be aware that the underground will leave 1-2 minutes after the bus arrived.
